

Median Household Income by Census Tract

Median Household Income by Census Tract, 1999

Median household incomes of $80,000 and above are found in census tracts in St. Louis County's central corridor, including areas of Ladue, Frontenac, Creve Coeur, Des Peres, Chesterfield and Wildwood. Tracts with median household incomes above $50,000 are found in far North County and far South County as well as in Central and West County. (The countywide median income for 1999 was $50,532.) The census tracts with the lowest median incomes, those below $35,000, are concentrated in near North County, in the Lemay area of South County and in Maplewood census tracts close to the City of St. Louis.

The distribution of census tracts with higher median incomes is similar to the distribution of tracts in which higher percentages of adults have college degrees. (See page 13.) Likewise, the higher income census tracts correlate with tracts with higher housing values. (See page 38.)
